“I drink it when I’m happy and when I’m sad. Sometimes I drink it when I’m alone. When I have company, I consider it obligatory. I trifle with it if I’m not hungry and drink it when I am. Otherwise, I never touch it — unless I’m thirsty.”

SPARKLING

Champagne

With a storied history, Champagne is produced at the limits of modern viticulture and is more a result of a process than a place. The method champenoise – characterized by a second fermentation in the bottle – is precisely how Champagne gets its bubbles, and, combined with a marginal climate and a uniquely chalky soil, the results can be stunning. We at Harvest have always been believers that any meal worth remembering starts with bubbles. Allow us to make believers out of you as well.

DOMESTIC WHITE

Chardonnay

Certainly one of the most planted grapes in the world, Chardonnay has as many expressions as there are places that grow it. California has long been the benchmark for the traditional American expression, which is associated with a richer, riper style, although now many producers are exercising restraint and bringing elegance to the forefront.

FRENCH WHITE

Loire Valley

Situated around the longest river in France, the Loire Valley is an enchanting place that has been largely untouched by time—the wines are much the same as they were a century ago. With a focus on acidity, these wines are meant for the table.

SAUVIGNON BLANC the grape thrives on the chalky mineral soils of the Eastern Loire, and in certain places you can find pockets of flint, locally known as silex, that help lend the grape its unique expression. Untouched by time—the wines are much the same as they were a century ago. With a focus on acidity, these wines are meant for the table.

Alsace

Heavily influenced by the Vosges Mountains, this is the sunniest area in all of France. The sunlight helps mitigate the northern climate and provides a unique influence on the grapes that thrive here. Pinot Blanc and Gris are the workhorses making dry, textured wines. Riesling is acid-driven with bright, lifted aromatics that tends to be drier than their German counterparts. Gewurztraminer is the aromatic powerhouse, full-bodied with a hint of spice. Muscat is intensely floral, dry, and full bodied.

INTERNATIONAL WHITE

Germany

As far north as viticulture is possible, only long days and the mitigating effect of major rivers make great wine possible here. While there are many grapes grown, Riesling is king. With plenty of lift and a range of sweetness levels, these are some of the most food-friendly wines in the world.

INTERNATIONAL WHITE

South Africa/Oceania/Mexico

These new world whites are all transplants from old world locations. They tend to have more fruit, body, and are perhaps less austere than their old world counterparts.

SKIN CONTACT

White grapes are usually pressed directly off the skins thereby allowing a pure expression of the must. Sometimes though skins are left to soak in the must while fermenting giving color and texture. Ranging from dark rose to orange, these are often referred to as orange wine, and can be exciting and fresh, or oxidative and a bit nutty.

ROSÉ

Made from [mostly] red grapes in a variety of styles, rose is made by limiting skin contact with the juice prior to fermentation. Thus, the wine retains the aromas and flavors of a red wine with the structure and freshness of a white. Contrary to the sugary concoction popular in the 70s in the US, the old world has been making dry, crisp, and refreshing rose for centuries. Pop open one of these examples from around the world and enjoy rose all day!

PINOT NOIR

California

A finicky grape, Pinot Noir is very particular about where it's grown. Driven by red fruit and lifted florality, there are a range of styles produced in the United States—some are more structured than others with a varying range of oak influence as well.

Oregon

Influenced by both California and Burgundy, Pinot Noir from Oregon is distinctly earthier than its California cousins, while perhaps less austere than Burgundy. The wines from here are an excellent stepping stone from the new world to the old world.

FRENCH RED

Champagne

A curiosity of Champagne, a small amount of still wine is made in all three colors, under the Coteaux Champenois appellation. While the red wine is most often blended into Champagne to make rosé, some is bottled on its own, a leaner, more austere version of Pinot Noir than offered in Burgundy.

ITALIAN RED

Piedmont

Directly translated to “the foot of the mountain,” the hills of Piedmont are nestled among the Alps. The climate is cool and the wines are some of Italy’s most noble and sought-after.

BARBERA the workhorse of Piedmont, this is the most-planted and consumed red here, often underrated and an amazing value.

681 Mauro Molino Leradici, Barbera d’Asti 2020 45

DOLCETTO though its name means the little sweet one, once its fermented into wine it’s anything but. The wines display darker fruit than Barbera, with more grit and tannin, but softer acidities.

685 Cantina del Pino Dolcetto d’Alba 2021 38

NEBBIOLO the most noble red of Italy, these wines are earthy, structured, and elegantly floral. They are generally best with food. Barbaresco is known as the Queen, traditionally softer than Barolo with calcareous marl as a base soil. Barolo is known as the King of wines and the wine of kings, traditionally more structured than Barbaresco though the line is becoming blurry as technique becomes more prominent than terroir.

ITALIAN RED

Tuscany

Home to some of Italy's most sought-after wines, Sangiovese is the grape of choice here. Some are 100% single varietal like Brunello, while others are allowed to blend in international and local varieties. Generally, they are earthy and structured.

MONTALCINO situated just below Chianti, the hill of Montalcino has been settled since Etruscan times. The warmest and driest region in Tuscany, the wines of Montalcino are made from the Brunello clone of Sangiovese, and yield age-worthy wines with intense color and concentration and bright acidity. These are among the most highly-regarded wines of Italy.

732	Brunello Il Poggione 2018	187
733	Brunello Sassetti, Pertimali , 2017	141

CHIANTI CLASSICO perhaps the most quality-driven sub-region within Chianti DOCG, the producers here have struggled to revive their reputation amidst an international market that has long associated their wines with the bulk-produced table wines bottled in straw baskets. Today, the winemakers that mark their bottles with the Black Rooster are putting an increased emphasis on organic and responsible viticulture and traditional winemaking practices, allowing the biodiversity and soul of the region to speak for itself in the bottle.

OTHER TUSCAN SANGIOVESE Tuscany is dotted with appellations outside the more notable Montalcino and Chianti such as Vino Nobile de Montepulciano, Montecucco and Morellino di Scansano. Others are simply labeled Toscana, often rejecting the Chianti Consorzio as an authentic regulating body.

Other Italian Landscapes

From far north in the Dolomites, eastward inside the belt of the Alps, or south along the Appennines, these wines showcase grapes often not seen outside of their home country. Rocky textures, alpine spice, and dark fruit run through all of these.

Greece

Home to hundreds of indigenous grape varieties, but despite its long history of viticulture, Greece has only entered the modern wine era in the last few decades. Xinomavro from the northern mountainous area is not unlike the Nebbiolo of Italy while wines from the southern regions have more weight and darker, sappier flavors.
